

The consent rules associated with the "Do Not Fax" rule will impact our nonprofit organization by eliminating our communicating via FAX with those with whom we have a business relationship. And as a result, this rule will interfere with our carrying out our charitable purpose. You will have to use resources to contact everyone to whom your organization sends faxes, obtain their permission, and reconfigure our databases and other records to store the consent information. This is an onerous task for us who have limited technical database expertise. We will also have to constantly sort all our lists of constituents, clients, members, etc., into those who have and have not provided consent. These are resources and energy that we otherwise could use to achieve our tax-exempt purpose in the community. Thanks, Terry Otto
